This article will help you better understand where to start your YouTube viewing experience. YouTube is a popular platform with millions of viewers tuning in daily, so it's no surprise that the videos have been growing too. This makes it difficult to find what you're looking for sometimes, unless you know how to use their search engine effectively; this article will teach you everything about using YouTube search more effectively. The first thing you're going to want to do is choose your search terms. The best ones are specific and match up exactly to whatever it is you're looking for. If you're having trouble thinking of ideas, try brainstorming some potential phrases or keywords that could be used in the title of the videos, and then tweak them a little bit. Once your search terms are chosen, you can conduct your YouTube search by clicking on the "YouTube Search" button located on the left side of this page; it looks like a magnifying glass. This will open up a new window in your browser where you can type in your search terms. You may also choose to narrow your search results by using the filters below the "YouTube Search" button; you can filter by time, relevance, upload date, and more. When you get the results of your YouTube search, there are several ways that you can filter them to find what you're looking for faster. If the results are too cluttered or unorganized, click on "Show More." This will expand the page so that you can see all of the options available to you, including recommended videos and suggested searches. If you want to find videos that are related to the search terms that were typed into the box, click on "Related." This will bring up a new window where you can see related videos. This is a great way to spot YouTube channels and videos that fit your criteria; it could be an affiliate link, which means the channel owner may make money or sponsorships if you click on it or watch one of their videos. When you dig deeper into the results of your YouTube search, make sure not to miss all of the recommended videos and suggested searches offered by YouTube. These videos may not be related to what you're looking for, but they will give you an idea of the types of videos that are popular with your audience. If you get too lost in all of the YouTube videos available to view, click on "More" and it will become another window where you can scroll down and see more videos. This is a great way to find new content that may appeal to your demographic; YouTube's algorithm does a very good job of surfacing new videos based on what it knows you like.
